

OCULUS Facial Cosmetic Surgeons

HARVEY "CHIP" COLE III, MD

Other than cost, what makes one plastic surgeon different from another and how can you tell who is better?

For starters, most general plastic surgeons have the luxury of working in a matter of inches or more to determine a successful surgery. For Dr. Cole and facial cosmetic procedures, specifically the eyes, happiness is measured in millimeters, with the results of your surgery—and your ultimate satisfaction—being measured within this minutia.

To the extent that precision is paramount, all plastic surgeons are far from created equal. While there are over 10,000 plastic surgeons in the world, only a fraction of them are oculoplastic surgeons. Dr. Cole is quadruple board certified in ophthalmology, cosmetic surgery, ophthalmic plastic and reconstructive surgery, and laser surgery.

Further differences between doctors emerge with regards to their respect for the profession. While some doctors just repeat standard and archaic procedures to keep the schedule full, Dr. Cole is constantly engaged in furthering his craft for the betterment of the field as well as for the satisfaction of his clients. With more than twenty-two years of experience, he is a member of ten professional societies, has taught at eight schools, has received four research grants and countless awards, and has been on the medical staff of four hospitals.

Through this relentless pursuit of precision, Dr. Cole has developed his own signature surgery called EyeLight™ Blepharoplasty—the latest in his extensive repertoire of procedures designed to turn back the years. The surgery uses lasers and endoscopes to repair and rejuvenate the upper and lower eyelid and cheek region. The result is an immediately brighter, more rested look, appearing as if the light in your eyes has been turned back on.
